U. S. SUBMARINE STILL AT BOTTOM

BUBBLES ABOVE VESSEL INDICATE FILLING WITH WATER — TO WORK ALL NIGHT.

GREAT CROWDS LINE SHORE

Wife of Captain Commanding Ill-fated Craft is Prostrated—Will Continue Work all Through The Night.

By Associated Press

HONOLULU, H. I., March 27.—All hope for the ill-fated submarine F-4 to be raised from the ocean's depths before nightfall today faded, when the chain loop attached to the submarine slipped and the boat sank back again onto the ocean bed. The most optimistic of naval officials have now conceded that there is no reasonable chance for any of the crew of twenty-one men to be taken out alive.

At five o'clock this afternoon the dredger California was still unable to make a fast hold on the submarine F-4. It is reported that the officers directing the work are convinced that all of the twenty-one members of the crew are dead, and have decided to postpone further efforts to raise the submarine until tomorrow, in order to give the exhausted crews a needed rest.

LATER.—A stream of bubbles continues to rise to the surface above the wrecked submarine, indicating that she is filling with water. This has caused the officials to decide to continue through the night in an effort to raise the craft.

Mrs. Alfred Ede, wife of the commander of the ill-fated vessel, is prostrated from grief and horror. Great crowds of people are lining the water front, among them the relatives of the unfortunate members of the crew of the submarine.

BANK ROBBERS WORK OKLAHOMA

ROB TWO NATIONAL BANKS OF
$5000 AND POSSES PURSUE

MAKING THEIR LAST STAND

Several Wounded in Battle—Two Desperados Captured—Beheaded Notorious Starr One of Latter.

By Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., March 27.—Hundreds of armed men tonight are circled around a patch of woods, two miles from Strand, Oklahoma, where the surviving members of a band of eleven desperados are in hiding, who robbed two National banks of approximately $5000. They are making their last desperate stand to avoid capture. Two of the band, one believed to be the notorious Henry Starr, the Cherokee desperado, were wounded and captured. It is reported that Jerry Turner, a farmer, was fatally wounded because he refused to throw up his hands at the robbers' command, when one of the banks was robbed. The other man captured gives the name of Estus. He is seriously wounded.

Paul Entry, aged 18, son of the town marshal of Strand, the hero of the posse, was wounded while the two men were captured. An odd coincidence in connection with the robbery and pursuit is that Governor Williams received a letter today in Starr's handwriting purporting to come from Reno, Nevada, and protesting against the charges that he was implicated in recent Oklahoma robberies.

No intimation as to the character of the communication has been given out by officials.

Fort Near Which the French Warship Bouvet Sunk

This photograph is the first taken of the great Turkish fort at a loss made. The Turkish government has made it a crime to photograph these works, and the gun which fired its主人 to get this picture probably took his life in his hands.

This is Chanak, one of the greatest forts in the narrowest of the Dardanelles, on which the allied fleets have made their famous attack. The French battleship Bouvet was within five miles of this fort, hoisted her colors, when she was struck by mines laid by the British warship HMS Queen Elizabeth, without any human knowledge, but the ship did not sink much, and was obliged to put back anchoring off Necessis Island.

The captain of the Bouvet had instructions to cross a dangerous mine field and took a passage near the head of the straits as far as Chanak, thus making the other members of the straits as far as possible.

"At 1:30 p. m. the Bouvet was five miles from Chanak and was being towed by the British warship HMS Queen Elizabeth, when she was struck by mines laid by the British warship HMS Queen Elizabeth, without any human knowledge, but the ship did not sink much, and was obliged to put back anchoring off Necessis Island."
